

Crockery Valley Notes

The Wayne Six Bridge, formerly the Newell Bridge, and the planned city of Newell were developed early in the 20th century. The bridge was opened in 1905. My Hoopie great-grandfather, John Enoch, helped build it, living in a tent town below it during the ferocious winter of 1904-05, when massive ice floes threatened the work.

T.P. Calhoun, September 2026